A bold font indicates values that have reasonably good reliability (relative MOE < 15%), while very light (or red) fonts indicate estimates that are statistically suspect (relative MOE 35% or more). Normal fonts indicate relative MOEs between 15% and 35%.

Blank data cells in this report indicate values that the Census Bureau suppressed due to issues related to statistical reliability. Data related to Disability are only available for 2008 and later because the way these data were collected changed that year.
